Tuition fees: the basics

Stressed about being saddled with thousands of pounds' worth of debt? We get to the bottom of tuition fees - it might not be as bad as you think...

Tuition fees are currently limited to £9,250 a year, a rise in line with inflation from the previous maximum of £9,000 per year. On paper, this seems like a large amount of money - and it is - but a lack of money shouldn't stop you going to university. In fact, most students won't have to pay fees up front and there is a wide range of support available, too.

Just to make things really confusing, there are quite a few differences in what you pay throughout the UK.

- If you're English: up to £9,250 per year when studying in England, Scotland or Northern Ireland; £9,000 in Wales. It may be more for a privately-run university or college.
- If you're Scottish: free if you're studying in Scotland; up to £9,250 per year in England and Northern Ireland; or £9,000 in Wales.

- If you're Welsh: up to £9,000 in Wales, or £9,250 per year in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland. Regardless of where you study, you'll receive a non-repayable fee grant for £4,954 and can apply for a loan to make up any shortfall.
- If you're Northern Irish: up to £4,030 per year for studying in Northern Ireland, or £9,250 per year in England, Scotland and Wales.

Student view:

Fees aren't putting me off university

"Tuition fees are quite expensive, but it doesn't put me off learning. I have most of my financial support in place, but I will hopefully get a job to bump up my spending money, as well as opening a savings account where I'll put in half of what I earn. This way I can make sure I have enough to pay bills and buy food, but also have money that I can spend on the fun stuff, like clothes and going out."

Lauren Savage - preparing to start a performing arts degree

Should I choose a degree course with lower tuition fees?

As tempting as it is, choosing a course with lower fees may not make much difference when it comes to what you pay back. This is because your annual repayments will depend on your salary, rather than the amount you borrowed.

Whether you choose a course that costs more or less than £9,250 per year, you'll repay the same amount each month - although it will take longer to pay it back. On top of that, many students won't have repaid the full amount of their loan by the point the remaining amount owed is written off (30 years after you graduate for English and Welsh students).

Tuition fee loans eligibility

In order to qualify for a tuition fee loan, you need to be studying in higher education for the first time and be under the age of 60 at the start of the academic year. Students undertaking full-time distance learning courses do not qualify.

Student loans and finance

Not sure where to start? With a bit of organisation, navigating your way through the world of student finance doesn't need to be as complicated as it may seem.

Student finance explained

Most students planning to go to university can borrow money to pay for their fees and living costs. The amount you receive will depend on your household income, where you live and what you study.

The student finance package includes:

1 Tuition fee loan: A non-means tested (not dependent on household income) loan, available for UK or EU full-and part-time students (see page 2 for eligibility requirements).

2 Maintenance loan: A means-tested loan for full-time UK students to help cover living costs, such as rent, food, books, travel etc.

3 Advanced learner loan: A non-means-tested loan available to students aged 19 and over, studying eligible courses from Level 3 (A-level equivalent) to Level 6.

How maintenance loans work

This helps support students with living expenses while at university, such as accommodation, food and course materials.

What is it based on?

The loan you receive takes into account where you will be studying and how much your parents earn, amongst other factors. Many students will not receive the full amount outlined below, meaning either you, or your parents, should be prepared to make up any financial shortfall.

How to apply for loans

If you are a student from England you can apply for student loans and grants online by visiting the student finance section in GOV.UK. Students from Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland can use the links in the resources box on page 3. Get your application in early - you don't even need to wait until you receive offers back from universities to get this started.

Where are you living and studying?	Maximum maintenance loan
Living with parents	Up to £7,097
Living away from home outside of London	Up to £8,430
Living away from home in London	Up to £11,002

Deadlines for applying

The deadlines for tuition fee loan and maintenance loan applications depend on where you live, rather than where you study, and range from mid-April to the end of June.

Make sure you've completed your funding application in plenty of time to receive your first instalment by September. However, if you do miss the deadline you can apply up to nine months after your course starts.

When do I have to repay my loans?

It may feel daunting to think about repayments, but student finance loans only need to be repaid once you've finished or left your course and are earning more than £21,000 a year, £1,750 a month or £404 per week (this has been frozen until at least April 2021).

You pay interest on your loan from the day you receive it until the loan is fully paid or written off. The level of interest depends on the current UK Retail Price Index (RPI). If you leave or suspend your course, you'll still be expected to repay any loan money you received.

How do I pay it back?

You don't physically hand any money over - your employer takes 9% of your income above the £21,000 threshold through the UK tax system (Pay As You Earn - PAYE). If you are self-employed you will pay it back via HMRC's self-assessment scheme. The amount you pay back is calculated on your pre-tax income above £21,000 and will be taken after you've paid tax.

If you usually earn less than this, but bonuses or overtime take you over this amount, the Student Loans Company

DID YOU KNOW?

- Student loans don't go on credit files.
- SLC doesn't employ debt collectors and you can't lose your home if you don't pay.
- If you don't start making repayments you could receive a penalty or be prosecuted.
- You still need to repay your loan if you move overseas.
- Your student debt will only ever apply to you and can't be passed on to anyone else.
- There's no penalty charge for repaying your student loan back early if you choose to.

(SLC) will still take 9% of anything above £1,750 from that month's salary. If you go on to earn less, your repayments will automatically stop.

While the loans do accrue interest, any outstanding debt still owed after 30 years in England and Wales is written off, meaning it's not always worth paying back a loan early. Student loans won't appear on your credit file either.

It's important to keep track of your repayments through P60 forms and payslips or by logging onto www.studentloanrepayment.co.uk. If you are just a few years away from paying it off, you can set up a direct debit to avoid being overcharged giving you more control over your money.

How much will I actually pay?

To give you a quick idea, if you are earning £25,000 a year, you are £4,000 over the repayment threshold. You will pay 9% on this amount, which is equal to £30 a month.

Bursaries and scholarships

Scholarships and bursaries may be offered on the basis of your academic abilities, household income, or a combination of both. Here's the lowdown...

How much you receive varies depending on the university, but the money doesn't have to be paid back (unless you decide to leave your course early) and payments go directly into your bank account. The money could be used to help pay towards tuition fees, books, equipment, childcare and travel, and funding may last for one year or the duration of your course.

What's the difference between a bursary and scholarship?

The terms 'bursary' and 'scholarship' are interchangeable across universities, but scholarships tend to be different in that they are competitive (and often supported by donors). Bursaries are usually non-competitive, automatic and based on financial need, and may be described as 'awards'.

How likely am I to receive funding?

In order to be considered, the university

TOP TIP

Contact your university directly to find out what it is offering for the current academic year. Find out more about what's available here: www.which.co.uk/extra-funding-university needs confirmation that:

- You have applied to Student Finance for income-assessed support
- The chosen university is stated on your application
- Your household income has been verified by Student Finance
- You (and your parents or partner) have given their consent to Student Finance to share information with the university.

Am I eligible for a bursary or scholarship?

You may be eligible for a bursary or scholarship if you fall under one or more of these criteria:

- Your household income is less than £25,000
- Your household income is between £25,001 and £42,611
- You are under-represented, for example, have UK Refugee status or live in an area with low participation of young people in higher education
- You have a disability, or a long-term health condition for which Disability Living Allowance (DLA) is not available
- You are working or studying away from the university
- You have come from a care background
- You are caring for an adult or children

- You are living in a hostel or shared accommodation
- You have been successful in your application for an advanced learner loan.

In some cases bursaries may not be available to:

- Part-time students
- Post-graduate students
- NHS-funded or sponsored students

- Students on placement years/sandwich year or year abroad.

How likely am I to receive an award?

This depends on whether you meet the criteria or not. Any university or college in England offering degree courses with a £6,000+ price tag has to offer bursaries, summer schools and outreach programmes to encourage applications from students from all backgrounds.

Expert view:

Investigate university department funds

"Not all awards may be administered centrally, and so some departments may have funds, scholarships or bursaries which central funding teams, are not necessarily aware of. To make sure that students maximise their student income, they should ensure that they check with their department whether there are any such locally managed schemes which they may be eligible to apply for."

Jon Lightfoot - Acting Student Funding Manager, Bristol University

Other funding to help you at university

Most unis and colleges offer some sort of financial assistance that you won't have to pay back. Here are some options you may not have thought about...

Fee waiver

This covers all or some of a student's tuition fees and may be given by a university or college alongside a bursary in one package of support. Students won't receive a cash lump sum - instead they will be given a reduction on their tuition fees, meaning the loan needed is less or does not need to be paid back. However, as many students will never pay off their full student loans, this might not be as generous as it first seems.

How to apply

The application process is based on similar criteria to bursaries and scholarships; information is passed on to your university as part of your Student Finance application.

University hardship funds

Hardship funds are designed to help you if you're having financial problems while you're studying or before arriving at university. They are also referred to as:

- England: Access to Learning Fund
- Wales: Financial Contingency Funds
- Northern Ireland: Support Funds
- Scotland: Discretionary Funds

TOP TIP

If you've been in local authority care you may be able to apply for a one-off bursary of up to £2,000 from your local authority, university or college.

It could be that you suddenly have less money coming in, there are unexpected costs or you have to pay a very large bill. Some universities will also consider specific additional bursary funding for certain students, such as care leavers or students who don't have any contact with their parents. In other cases, there may be charitable funds which award money or vouchers that can go towards things such as IT equipment or vouchers. You may also be able to apply for a small interest-free short-term loan if you need urgent assistance for essential living costs until you receive your next funding instalment.

TOP TIP

In some cases the students' union will run its own smaller funding scheme, which is also worth checking out.

Expert view: Hardship funds

"We try and engage with students to find out why there is a reason for them having financial difficulties. For example, students who are commuting back home to London every weekend to support a parent who is ill. A standard assessment won't always reflect exactly what is going on for that student and investigating further allows us to look at what is really happening and offer the best advice.."

James Pooley - Student Welfare Service, University of Leicester

How to apply

You will need to fill out an application form from your university or college. In most circumstances only students who receive loans or grants from Student Finance can apply. Priority is given to students with children, those in their final year or those who are unable to work due to illness or disability.

Other government grants and financial support

There is a wide range of extra support available from the government if:

- You're on a low income
- You have children or dependant adults
- You have a disability
- You are studying medicine, social work or teacher training
- You're studying abroad.

This financial support could include: Income Support, Childcare Grant, Parent's Learning Allowance (full-time students only), Adult Dependants' Grant (full-time

Student budgeting

Worried you'll splash the cash the minute it hits your account? Most students struggle with their finances at some point, so set a budget to help you manage your money.

What to include in your budget

Once you get your loan it's tempting to head straight to the shops, but you'll regret blowing your budget in the first week. Use our budget planner overleaf to help you understand how to manage your money.

Your biggest expense will most likely be your accommodation. However there are plenty of other costs you might not have necessarily factored in yet. Our top 10 are below...

1 Course materials Try second-hand book sales, joining student Facebook groups, buying earlier editions of text books or getting your books from the library.

2 Transport Whether it's a bus to lectures or travelling back home for the holidays, you'll need to factor in travel costs. Luckily, student travel cards reduce the costs of getting around by up to a third, including: 16-25 Railcard, 18+ Student Oyster Photocard and Young Persons Coachcard.

3 Food It's a myth that students live off baked beans - It's possible to eat normally and healthily, whatever your budget. To keep costs down, make a shopping list and stick to it, cook in bulk and freeze, and make packed lunches for cheaper meals on the go.

4 Entertainment From freshers' week to clubs, student nights, gigs, sport or a quick catch-up with friends at the union, the cost of socialising can soon mount up. The student union is your best bet for cheaper food and drinks. Consider nights in with housemates, free events or two-for-one cinema nights.

5 Utilities If you're in halls of residence, utilities such as gas, electricity and water are usually included as part of your rent, but that won't normally be the case in private housing. You'll need to put some money aside each month to cover these. Online deals are usually the cheapest, plus you'll get an extra discount if paying by direct debit.

6 Internet This is another cost you usually won't have to pay for in halls, but it will be a factor in private housing. Compare deals to get the best quote for broadband and installing a landline or cable.

7 Insurance As tempting as it is to cut costs and not bother with insurance, there is always the chance of theft. Tot up the cost of your stuff and get some quotes online - and check if you're covered as part of your parents' home insurance policy.

8 Toiletries Make the most of special offers and value brands and check out pound shops for good deals.

TOP TIP

There are many apps and websites to help you manage your money - try out Save the Student rent calculator, Spendometer and Money Lover to get you started.

9 Clothes You can save money by making the most of student discounts (and check out sites such as MyUniDays). You will also get extra discounts and money back through cashback websites. Or try clothes swapping via websites such as Vinted, or host your own party!

10 Extra study expenses Printing, photocopying and buying stationery - the little costs can add up, but there are ways to keep them to a minimum. For example, is it worth buying a printer? (you can get a decent budget one for under £50).

Getting a part-time job

Some universities discourage students from taking on part-time jobs (such as Oxbridge), but for many it's a necessity. Other universities encourage it, saying it helps students improve their employability and will run 'jobshops' to help students find work. It's worth considering when you can earn up to £11,500 tax-free (sadly, students don't get out of paying Income Tax and National Insurance).

Student bank accounts

Banks are keen to sign you up now as a student to hopefully keep you as a life-long customer. That's why attractive incentives are often on offer, including free or discounted railcards, cinema tickets or vouchers.

See these as perks rather than the main reason you choose a particular account. If it's likely that your outgoings will exceed your income at some point during your studies, it's worth looking for the one with the highest overdraft available.

Overdrafts can come in useful if you're short one month, especially as most student overdrafts won't charge interest up to a certain amount. It's not 'free money', but can help to tide you over financially until you have more money coming into your account. Just remember that after you reach this limit you will have to pay interest on top of the money you've borrowed. Compare the latest student bank account offers at www.which.co.uk/studentbank

TOP TIP

If you don't meet your repayments each month, credit cards and store cards increase the debt that you have to repay. Aside from getting the scissors out to get rid of temptation, speak to your university's finance support team for advice on managing your money.

Student budget planner

Use our budget planner to understand your living costs while at uni.

Add up your various sources of income below, before dividing the total by the number of months or weeks you'll be at university for. Use this as a basis for setting a realistic budget that covers your outgoings.

Expert view: Keep the cash flowing

"A lot of students spend their first instalment of funding quickly as they are not used to having such large amounts of cash available to them, and forget to plan ahead for things like travelling home for the holidays. Our advice to students - in addition to planning a budget - is to look at the dates when your funding is paid as the instalments are not always evenly spread out over the year, and plan a weekly spending limit."

Student view: How I budget

"I was surprised how little the student loan covered and how I always needed outside help and savings to cover all the costs. But I did put money in a separate savings account and tried to forget that it was there, so I had a bit of a buffer. It was about making sure I didn't have any big splurges - I went on a few holidays, but I never used my loan for that - my loan was literally for nights out, food and travel."
